Founded in 1963, the Mound City Archaeological Society is the St. Louis chapter of the Missouri Archaeological Society. Both are non-profit educational organizations dedicated to:

- encouraging cooperation between amateur, professional, and academic archaeologists,
- uniting those interested in the study of past human lives and cultures, and
- promoting the systematic study, investigation, and interpretation of prehistoric and historic artifacts and archaeological sites in a professional and appropriate manner.

“ARCHAEOLOGY IS READING THE BOOK OF THE EARTH”

– Dr. Carter Revard, Native American poet, author, and Washington University Professor of English

The Mound City Archaeological Society uses archaeology to build an awareness and appreciation of our region’s rich cultural heritage. Archaeology is more than just “digging up stuff” and it’s often the similarities, rather than the differences, that we find most interesting when we compare the lives of earlier inhabitants to our own.

We do this through public lectures and other educational activities, as well as fieldwork opportunities under the careful supervision of professional archaeologists. We also endorse the Society for American Archaeology’s Principles of Archaeological Ethics (saa.org/aboutSAA/ethics.html).

The Mound City Archaeological Society is proud to sponsor public programs on the first Tuesday of every month at the Missouri History Museum in Forest Park. Entertaining and informative lectures on a wide variety of archaeological topics start at 7:00pm and are preceded by a business meeting at 6:30pm. Both the lectures and the meetings are free and open to the public. Everyone is welcome.

Come early to tour the museum exhibits, hang out in the restaurant, and browse the gift shop.
